It Could Be
That We're Not Always Right

Juan Peron, the alleged dictator of Argentina, was given a medal of honor by the Argentine government, some time ago gave a medal to Maj. Gen. Harry H. Vaughan, who is President Truman's military aide.

The gift aroused criticism at home, and a House Armed Services subcommittee ruled that Vaughan couldn't accept it. But yesterday the subcommittee reversed its action — and now Vaughan has Peron's medal.

What does it mean? Nothing much. Argentina played the neutral waiting game during World War II, which didn't do any harm to us. Yet Argentina had a problem of her own — her biggest foreign customer was Great Britain, and English, Germans and Italians were major segments of her population.

Currently it is charged that Argentina's leader is a dictator. But there is doubt about that, too. In the last national election, Juan Peron had powerful opposition, and won only by about the margin used by President Truman defeated Governor Dewey.

Incidentally, the United States stuck its nose into that particular election, and some folks are unkind enough to hint that if we hadn't done so Senator Peron might have lost the election.

We are getting fed up with those Americans who are arrogant enough to presume our country knows all about everything. They interfere with foreign countries. If their interference is resented and rejected, then that makes the foreign country a "dictatorship" and if their interference is accepted, the foreign country is just as likely as not to collapse.

Either way, the cause of international understanding sustains heavy damage.

The case of Gen. Vaughan and the Peron medal, now happily cleared up, recalls to me the case of Arkansas' own late Senator Joseph R. Robinson, who once undertook a mission to Adolf Hitler in behalf of our government — and was criticized for it. No one here liked Hitler, least of all did Robinson like him. But there is always a chance that trouble can be averted by a personal contact. Robinson tried it and lost. But it stands in his record that he had the statesmanlike courage to undertake an unpopular job because his government wanted it done.

If Peron, despite our interference in an Argentine election, still wants to offer the olive branch of friendship it is correct national policy to accept it — and keep our secret thoughts to ourselves.

Statistics Show Living Cost Down

Washington, June 24 — (AP) — The cost of living nosed slightly downward during the month ended May 15.

The bureau of labor statistics said today its index declined three-tenths of one per cent for the month.

In mid-April the index had advanced slightly, one-tenth of one per cent, over mid-March.

Officials said actually there had been no really substantial change for the past two months in the consumer price index covering large cities.

But fluctuations have been wider, however, between the individual cities, than in the national average.

Prices of all major groups except rent were a little lower than the month ended April 15, the report said. Fuel cost fell 1.3 per cent, house furnishings 1.3 per cent and apparel 0.6 per cent.

Retail food prices decreased 0.2 per cent for the month.

During the month ended May 15 food prices in 28 cities, increased in 25 and were unchanged in 3.

Greek Premier Sophoulis Dies at 88

Athens, June 25 — (AP) — Themistokles Sophoulis, premier of Greece, died today.

He was 88 years old. Death occurred at his summer residence at 4:15 p. m. although he had been ill and was near death last fall.

Sophoulis, a key figure in Greek politics for a half century, had been premier since Sept. 7, 1947, despite the turmoil of Greek politics occasioned by the civil war with the Communist guerrillas in the north.

The venerable leader of the Liberal party had been an important cog in the Truman doctrine, under which the aid of the United States went to Greece in her civil war and to Turkey, under the shadow of the Russian bear.

He weathered the most recent political storm only two months ago, and this after suffering a severe heart attack which had him bedridden for several months. His reshuffled cabinet took over in April after a scandal involving a member of the previous government had caused the aged premier to offer King Paul his resignation.

Airliner in Emergency Stop Here

Hope had a commercial airliner on the municipal airport at noon today — but it wasn't a scheduled stop.

Capt. G. R. Stratton, flying a new twin-engine Convair on the eastbound American Airlines run, discovered soon after taking off from Texarkana for Little Rock that one of his propellers was giving trouble. Being in the vicinity of the Hope municipal airport — largest in Arkansas — he brought the ship down here for an emergency stop.

Passengers will be transferred to another American Airlines plane, and mechanics are en route to check the ailing propeller.

Weather was threatening this morning, and about noon a heavy rain enveloped the Hope area.

Young GOPs Have Stassen, Warren Battle

By JACK BELL
Salt Lake City, June 24 — (AP) — A fight between backers of Harold E. Stassen and Gov. Earl Warren of California over the choice of a new chairman appeared developing among young Republicans here today.

At the same time, an AFL labor leader told the young Republican national federation bluntly that its leadership needs "a complete change in thinking" to the point where it will show some "responsibility for the public welfare."

Joseph D. Keenan, director of labor's league for political education, said in a speech before the AFL-CIO leaders, including Senator Robert A. Taft of Ohio and House Minority Leader Joseph Martin of Massachusetts — as the convention's second day's sessions got underway.

There seemed little doubt that Keenan also was aiming at GOP National Chairman Hugh D. Coitt Jr., here for the sessions, when the AFL official asserted in a prepared talk.

"If recent elections have indicated that the majority of American voters feel that the Republican party and its candidates show a lack of responsibility for the public welfare, it is because Republican leaders and many Republican candidates have turned deaf ear to the urgent requests of the American people."

Keenan's scolding, however, was overshadowed by the battle for the chairmanship between candidates connected in the past with Warren, the 1948 vice presidential nominee, and Stassen, former Minnesota governor and now president of the University of Pennsylvania. Waters' opponents charge, however, that he is a "sell-out."

Warren backers were lining up behind Laughlin E. Waters, California state legislator who has been helping carry the ball for Warren's tax program in his state.

Waters' opponents charge, however, that he is a "sell-out" and that he is a "sell-out" and that he is a "sell-out."

That's a tough charge in this contest for the chairmanship.

Waters' opponents charge, however, that he is a "sell-out" and that he is a "sell-out" and that he is a "sell-out."

Some of the delegates who would like to see Stassen get another shot at the GOP presidential nomination in 1952 are backing Alex. Ackerman, Jr. of Florida.

Frank C. P. McGinnis of Philadelphia, former president of the national junior chamber of commerce, was showing strength as a third candidate among nearly a dozen seeking the chairmanship.

Hope Police Get New Radio Plant

The Hope Police Department's radio system has been replaced with a brand new RCA two-way outfit and formally licensed by the Federal Communications Commission.

Victor H. Cobb, of this city, who made the installation for RCA, pointed out today that the frequency of the police radio is high enough to avoid interference with domestic reception and at the same time it assures complete secrecy for police communications.

The transmitter is located at Hope police headquarters on Third street, and is operated by Lowell Spang, sergeant of the Arkansas State Police Department.

The system included two mobile units at present, but the city is licensed to maintain a total of four units — with the idea some time, perhaps, of using spare units in the fire department.

Arkansans Help Defeat Labor Bill Proposal

Washington, June 23 — (AP) — Both Arkansas senators—Fulbright and McClellan—voted with the senate majority which yesterday defeated a plan of Senator Morse (R-Ore.) to have congress deal with national emergency strikes on a case-by-case basis.

100,000 Motor Vehicles Escape Tax Says Newton

Little Rock, June 24 — (AP) — Chairman C. P. Newton of the Arkansas tax commission believes personal property taxes are not being paid on some 100,000 motor vehicles in Arkansas which are subject to such a tax.

More than 421,000 automobiles and trucks were registered last year with the state revenue department, but only 229,613 were on the tax books, Newton said.

Young Man Is Held for Brutal Murder

Morrison, Ia., June 24 — (AP) — A young man who authorities said admitted to his mother he killed and brutally murdered a pretty 22-year-old woman, was held in the Grundy county jail today.

Sheriff John A. Meyer said he would question the man, Edward J. (Buddy) Beckwith, 27, of Morrison, and probably would file a first degree murder charge against him today.

The nearly nude body of Mrs. Irma Jean Stahlhut, mother of a 13-months old son, was found early yesterday morning by her husband, Harvey, in a large walk-in refrigerator of the tavern they operated here.

Both breasts had been cut off the body, her throat cut from ear to ear and her body cut open "down the middle," the sheriff said. There also were two stab wounds in the heart. One of the breasts, Meyer said, was found in a bloody slip and brassiere tangled around her neck and shoulders.

Beckwith was identified by three patrons as the last person besides Mrs. Stahlhut remaining in the tavern when she was found. He was brought in line with increased costs of operations. He predicted a deficit for the fiscal year 1950 starting July 1, on the basis of current rates, of more than $400,000. This, he said, would result primarily from increasing a volume of business "below cost."

Atomic Job Assigned University

Fayetteville, June 24 — (AP) — The University of Arkansas will enter the field of atomic energy research under sponsorship of the atomic energy commission, beginning July 1.

University President Lewis Webster Jones announced last night a three-year contract had been signed. AEC research funds amounting to $25,000 will be available the first year.

Specifically the contract calls for research in "chemical effects of nuclear transformation."

Dr. Raymond R. Edwards, a native Arkansan, will be in active charge of the project, which will be carried on here and in the university's school of medicine in Little Rock.

Dr. Edwards has carried out earlier research in the same field at AEC's Oak Ridge, Tenn., plant and at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

The group, Dr. Edwards said, will investigate "entirely new" techniques in development of radioactive "tracer" compounds.

Dr. Edwards said the preliminary work already done at "hot atom" techniques, by which are utilized the high energy quanta of temperatures of several billion degrees fahrenheit.

Albis Bell, 27, of Batesville, testified at a coroner's inquest that Long and Brookerson stopped him and Williamson and their wives and that Long shot Williamson as the latter struggled with Brookerson.

Long is in jail at Newport for safekeeping.

Mrs. Anderson Dies in Local Hospital

Mrs. Ellie Lee Anderson, 59, died today in a local hospital. She lived near Hope.

She is survived by her husband, John Lee Anderson, two sons, Garland and Cecil of Hobbs, N. M., five brothers, Fred Barr of Bingen, Jesse Barr of Eugene, Oregon, Sanford Dudley of Washington, K. G. Dudley of Shreveport and Oscar Dudley of Hope.

Funeral services will be held at 4 p. m. Sunday at Central church of Christ, south on Highway 29, by the Rev. J. D. Copeland of Delight.

Plenty of Smoke But No Fire in E. Third Alarm

Where there's smoke there isn't always fire.

Mrs. Boy McRae was at a bridge party last night at the R. C. Ellen home on the Lewisville highway when the "phone rang. It was her sister, Mrs. C. V. Nunn, Jr., and she called up to say, Did Mrs. McRae know her East Third street home was on fire?

Mr. and Mrs. C. V. Nunn, Sr., were driving by the house when they saw smoke, and they told Mrs. Nunn, Jr., to call her sister.

But it wasn't fire, after all. Somebody was holding a demonstration on how to spray a house with DDT.

Would Take Postmasterships Out of Politics

Washington, June 24 — (AP) — President Truman today recommended legislation aimed at removing postmaster appointments from politics.

In a special message to congress he urged enactment of a law to appoint all postmasters subject only to provisions of the civil service and classification acts.

This would mean that the time-honored custom of the president appointing first, second and third class postmasters—of whom there are some 21,000—would be abandoned. Senate confirmation of the presidential choice likewise would no longer be a part of the routine.

Postmasters theoretically have been under the civil service system for some time. But legislators frequently have had a hand in picking one of the first three parties in the examination and, furthermore, the senate for years has had final say on confirmation. Fourth class postmasters are appointed by the postmaster general and do not have to be confirmed. These are for the smaller offices.

The new legislation requested by Mr. Truman is in line with a recommendation of the government reorganization commission headed by former President Hoover.

To put the $600,000,000 postoffice department on a more efficient and businesslike basis, the President urged anew that postal rates be brought in line with increased costs of operations. He predicted a deficit for the fiscal year 1950 starting July 1, on the basis of current rates, of more than $400,000. This, he said, would result primarily from increasing a volume of business "below cost."

Miss Flatly Denies Seeing Chambers, Judith Screams 'Framed' in Espionage Trials

New York, June 24 — (AP) — Alger Hiss testified at his perjury trial today that the last time he saw Whitaker Chambers, former courier for a Red spy ring, was in "late May or early June, 1938."

The former high state department official thus denied one of the two counts of the perjury indictment against him: That he lied when he said he had not seen Chambers since Jan. 1, 1937.

Chambers, the government's key witness in its charges against Hiss, repeatedly has accused Hiss of passing secret government papers to a spy network.

Shortly after the dapper Hiss resumed the witness stand today, his top defense counsel, Lloyd Paul Stryker, asked him whether he had seen Chambers subsequent to the Jan. 1, 1937 date.

"I did not see him after that until some time within the last 12 months," Hiss replied firmly.

Earlier, Hiss denied flatly that he had passed any restricted documents to Chambers, confessed Communist spy ring courier.

Hiss began his second day on the witness stand by detailing the high honors that had come to him during his brilliant legal career.

Chambers, whose earlier testimony to Congress was a full week of the trial, is the chief accuser of Hiss. The perjury charges grew out of Hiss' flat denial before a spy-probing grand jury that he had fed Chambers state department papers for years.

Some Believe Losing Arm Is Handicap Too Difficult to Overcome — Some Know It Isn't

By HAL BOYLE

New York — (AP) — Capt. Bob Anderson isn't worried about his own arm.

But he is worried about the caliber of the enemy ball team that will trot into the Polo Grounds against his outfit the night of July 26th. And of course he's getting already about the attendance.

"Last year he drew only about 9,000," he said indignantly. "What do they think we play in — wheel-chairs? This year we're hoping for 30,000."

The game is one of the most unusual sports events in New York. It'll be the 17th annual baseball contest between amputee war veterans, sponsored by the National Amputation Foundation.

"We're trying to raise 100 million for an amputee information and research center here," said Anderson. "But the main thing is to get the public out so we can show them an amputee can do anything they can."

Bob, 25, lost his left arm in a German artillery shell in France in 1945. He is shortstop and captain of the arm amputee team. The rival team is made up of leg amputees.

"And are these leg amputees getting cocky," he said. "They're going around town playing 2-10-1 bets against us."

"We beat them 4 to 1 last season, but they do have a terrific team this year. It'll be a close game."

"All the players on both teams are vets from the second world war. The first world war vets are getting punchy and slowing up. We want to keep the game fast. These leg amputees are really fast. They say their pitcher, Bert Shepard, can still run a hundred yards in around 12 seconds."

Shepard, a former big leaguer, is now player-manager with the Waterbury, Conn., timbers in the

Condemned Negro Appeals Death Sentence

Little Rock, June 24 — (AP) — Wesley Hildreth, Lee county Negro, who was to have died in the electric chair this morning for rape, has appealed his conviction to the Arkansas Supreme court.

The appeal filed yesterday automatically stayed the execution, but even if there hadn't been an appeal the electrocution would have been postponed.

The electric chair at the Tucker prison farm is being moved to a new death cell and will not be ready for use until around July 8. Hildreth first was convicted in Lee county. The supreme court granted him a new trial. The second trial was held in Phillips county on a change of venue, and he again was convicted and sentenced to death. The complaining witness was a young white farm wife.

At left is the way Gerald Sullivan looked last March at the Roxbury Crossing police station in Boston, after he was rescued from a room which his mother had held him captive in for 10 years. Racial Issue Rocks Asso. of Women

By LOYD BULMUR
United Press Staff Correspondent

Seattle, June 24 — (UP) — The color issue rocked the American association of university women today as the Washington, D. C., branch seceded in the fight over membership of Negro women to membership.

The Washington branch suffered a stunning defeat in its move to bar Negroes from the association. The national body voted 2,188 to 68 to maintain "present by-laws which state flatly that 'any person may become a member upon presentation of her credentials from an accredited university.'"

More than a year ago, the Washington branch amended its by-laws to make all prospective members pass a screening test designed to block Negroes from membership.

The national board sent a stiff reprimand to the branch emphasizing that membership did not rely on qualifications of "race, color, creed or religion."

The board took the case to the District of Columbia courts in an effort to expel the branch for refusing to conform to national by-laws of the organization.

Against night, Mrs. Paul Evanshaw of Haddonfield, Pa., motioned that the board of directors be authorized to take action to dissolve the court-issued injunction which would have excluded the Washington branch from the association.

Mrs. Evanshaw's proposal had just been adopted when Dr. Agnes Conrad, president of the District of Columbia branch, rose with her startling statement that the branch was seceding anyway.

"In spite of the fact that the convention improved its by-laws," she said, "the Washington branch feels it cannot do otherwise than withdraw since no screening process was instituted."

Her these sister-delegates from the capital rose and other branch representatives marched swiftly and silently to the door.

The association already was planning to form a new branch at Washington to oppose the rebellious group.

The newly-re-elected president, Dean Althea K. Hotel of the University of Pennsylvania said that "if the group fails to get together back in Washington, a minority group at the branch will form a new Washington, D. C. chapter."

The district claims 1,000 members. Most delegates expressed satisfaction on the outcome of the race question.

Mrs. Barbara D. Evans, New York, head of the by-laws revision committee, said "it is with great satisfaction that we have crossed a new frontier which will enable us to broaden our work for greater educational opportunities."

Dean Hotel said "this will open a new era for Negro women. We will welcome them with open arms."

To continue the Salvation Army campaign in Hope and Hempstead county that began several days ago the Beta Sigma Phi Sorority assisted by a group of other girls of the city will conduct a Tag Day for the benefit of The Salvation Army campaign, on Saturday June 25.

The young ladies will sell Salvation Army tags on the streets in order to give those who have not been approached for donations yet an opportunity to help in this drive. A great many people have not yet been reached for their donation and there is need to continue the drive until the quota of $2,400 has been reached.

The Beta Sigma Phi sorority under the leadership of Mrs. E. P. Formby, director, will begin their Tag Selling on the streets in the early afternoon, however, other girls that will be assisting the sorority will sell in the morning.

Headquarters for the tags and other materials and instructions will be at Montgomery Ward office here.

It is hoped that the response will be generous to this effort to advance this most worthy while work.

Transformer of AP&L Burns?

Little Rock, June 24 — (AP) — A huge Arkansas Power and Light Co. transformer, filled with hundreds of gallons of oil, burned yesterday near Jacksonville.

Loss to the unit was estimated by company officials at "between $50,000 and $60,000."

The Jacksonville area was without power for approximately five hours.

The origin of the blaze was undetermined.

No Trouble Is Expected for Housing Bill

Washington, June 24 — (AP) — Amid signs they had overestimated the strength of a southern revolt, democratic leaders today boosted the margin by which they expect the house to pass a trimmed-down housing bill.

Rep. Priest of Tennessee, the assistant democratic floor leader, said after counting noses that the measure will sail through the house with 40 and 50 votes to spare.

"Up to yesterday, administration forces had counted on no better than a 30-vote edge, with much depending on how southern Democrats voted."

The house begins balloting on amendments today after a long and bitter debate. The final showdown on the bill probably will not occur until next week.

Priest, whose job it is to keep a running check on how votes are stacking up, told reporters "a minimum of 30 and probably more" Republicans will vote for the bill, even though the house GOP policy committee has taken a firm stand against it.

The Republican opposition kept up a running battle against the legislation yesterday with more shouts that it is a drift to "socialism" and "economic slavery" and would impair the financial position of the government.

Franklin D. Roosevelt, Jr., speaking for the first time as a member of congress, disputed that. Passage of the bill, he said, would be a blow to both socialism and communism.

Rep. Wolcott (R-Mich.) leading the opposition, told newsmen that he and his philosophy of the bill and has seen no substitute proposal at that he will support no matter what edge the Democrats claim, he said, the fight will go on.

Several GOP senate members, including Senator Taft of Ohio, backed the bill, when it sailed through the senate April 21 by a 67 to 33 vote.

The measure calls for a vast program of slum clearance, publicly owned housing and farm housing aids. The cost is estimated all the way from $7,000,000,000 to $20,000,000,000.

President Truman asked for construction of 1,600,000 publicly owned housing units in seven years. A house democratic meeting decided to cut this back to 810,000 units in six years — the same figure provided in senate bill.

Farmers Told How to Kill Boll Weevil

Wait until the first brood of boll weevils are feeding before poisoning was the advice of Dr. Charles Lincoln, Extension Entomologist of the University of Arkansas College of Agriculture, in a series of demonstrations held in the fields of cotton at the demonstrations should be ready for poisoning in about two weeks. The weevils are now in the cotton in the fields of the William Rounton farm and at the Yarbber farm under the arrangements of Oliver L. Adams, county agent.

Dr. Lincoln had each farmer present to study the habits of the boll weevil so that they would be able to use precautions so as not to make conditions favorable for some other insect that could cause as much or more damage to the crop than the insect originally set out to poison. Plant lice or aphids develop at different rates and different years after poisoning with calcium arsenate and other poisons. If it is necessary to control aphids the calcium arsenate application should be made about May 15 to 20. It is free for the asking.

Each Monday morning at 8:15 on the Farm Breakfast Program of KXAR the county agent will give cotton insect progress as noted in different fields of the county. Cotton farmers will find this a most valuable aid in making their scouting and poisoning decisions.

City Buys Fog Applicator to Fight Pests

A TIFA fog applicator, the kind the army and navy used during the war, was purchased by the city last night following a demonstration at Fair park. Delivery of the $2000 machine is expected within a few days.

The applicator can be mounted on a truck or jeep and can spray the entire city with an insecticide in a single night. An insecticide strong enough to kill flies, mosquitoes, roaches and other small insects can be used safely.

During the war the army and navy used this machine to combat insect-infested areas. It worked successfully. One demonstration last night at Fair park completely convinced the Mayor and members of the council.

A statewide polio scare had much to do with the purchase, a member of the council said today. "If this machine should prevent a single case of infantile paralysis it would be money well spent."

There are more than 8,000 scheduled mail trains every day in the United States.

The highway system in the United States is estimated to be worth about $41 billion.

Minor Fire

Firemen put out a blaze in the meter wiring behind Rialto theater this morning. There was practically no damage, members of the Fire Department said.

Highway Rescinds Weight Order

Little Rock, June 24—(UP)—The Arkansas highway commission today rescinded its earlier action of increasing the load limits for trucks on the highways of the state.

Chairman C. C. Lambert of Helena said that the commission was unanimous and that there "is nothing we can do but rescind our action."

At a previous meeting, the group raised the maximum overall limit to 72,000 pounds. It was reduced today to 55,980.

Lambert read an opinion by department Attorney Murray Reed pointing out that the limits were set by the 1937 legislature and that the commission had no authority to change them.

In other action, the commission cancelled the present policy the department carries with the Provident Life and Accident company and affirmed a committee recommendation that the business be given to the Union Life Insurance company of Little Rock.

Members of the committee were Gov. Sid McMath, highway director C. C. Baker, and state comptroller Lee Roy Bousley. The commission authorized the engineering staff to work out plans for the allocation of $800,000 in county aid funds for construction work on county roads.

Later today, the commission was scheduled to award contracts for a quantity of equipment and for an estimated $2,500,000 in road and bridge construction.

There is no trustworthy record of the use of bells before the Christian era.

Jones Mill to Be Idle By July 1 Strike

Hot Springs, June 25—(AP)—About 800 union employees at the Jones Mill aluminum plant near here have voted to go on strike July 1. The workers, members of the United Steel Workers of America (CIO) took a strike vote at their regular meeting last night. They approved a walkout by a vote of 527 to 0.

James Dickerson, union director for Arkansas, Louisiana and Texas, said the vote was the first of three scheduled in Arkansas this week.

Workers at the bauxite mines at bauxite were to vote on the strike measure today. Voting was to be held in the Hurricane creek plant today and Saturday.

All three plants are operated by the Reynolds Metals company, which employs about 1,600 aluminum workers in the state.

Dickerson said the strike vote was called after negotiations between the union and company officials broke down earlier this week.

The present work contract expires July 1. Dickerson said the union is seeking wage increases, a pension plan and is protesting a company employment cutback.

A company spokesman declined to comment.

Steps Taken Against Czech Clergymen

Prague, Czechoslovakia, June 24—(UP)—Communist authorities have acted against Catholic clergymen accused of trying to foment disorder in several parts of Slovakia, the newspaper Lidove Noviny reported today.

The report indicated that the active struggle between the church and the government had spread throughout Czechoslovakia. It was the first hint that officials might have started action aimed at the prosecution of bishops and priests.

The Czech cultural newspaper said the Slovak governing body met yesterday and heard a report by the commissioner of interior about the efforts of bishops and some priests to arouse disorder at several places.

On June 21 premier Antonin Zapotocky, in a broadcast to the nation assailing Archbishop Josef Beran, said that "law and justice must be used against marauders, bandits and those who call for disorder and unrest."

Zapotocky warned that the government would not "tolerate church officials terrorizing the freedom of political opinion for patriotic Catholic priests."

He added that "Soviet leadership is having to contend with problems in the satellite countries where there is steadily growing revolt against the extreme tolerance of Soviet communism."

Speaking of Czechoslovakia, Hungary and Poland, Dulles declared that the people of these countries "will not willingly accept rigorous conformity to a pattern of life made for them in Moscow."

I quote Mr. Dulles because he has been a student of Soviet Russian affairs, and has exceptional opportunities to secure information. He is a member of the United States delegation to the United Nations, is Republican adviser on foreign policy to Secretary of State Acheson, and attended the Big Four foreign ministers council meeting just concluded in Paris. Furthermore, his statement conforms to predictions which this column has been making.

The evidence is complete enough that there is no place in this day and age for totalitarian dictatorships, no matter what ideological banner they fly. The rank and file won't stand for such regimentation indefinitely—especially dictatorships imposed by foreign nations.

The signs multiply that Moscow is having difficulties, perhaps at home but certainly among the satellites. The outstanding case, of course, is that of the premier Balkan state of Yugoslavia which, under leadership of hard-boiled Marshal Tito, has refused to surrender its sovereignty to Moscow.

However, there is dissension in other satellites, and purges have been reported recently.

As might be expected, some of the worst clashes revolve about the Communist attack on religion. Fresh trouble was reported yesterday by a Vatican source in Rome.

It was stated that two leading bishops of the outlawed Uniate church in Romania (the Uniate church is a branch of the Roman Catholic faith) have been put to torture by Communist officials in an effort to break their allegiance to the pope.

Meanwhile, that Communist Catholic Archbishop Josef Beran is fighting attempts of the nation's Communist regime to get control of the church. The position there is tense, with public feeling running high.

Secretary Acheson declared yesterday that Communist Czechoslovakia is waging a campaign against religious freedom which violates "the decency of civilization."

Similar situations exist in Poland, Bulgaria and Hungary and from far-off northern Korea comes word of widespread strife between the Catholic church and the Communist government.

As pointed out in a previous column, this refusal of religion to buckle under may well prove to be the greatest obstacle which bolshevism has to overcome in its efforts to sovietize the world. It is a cardinal tenet of atheistic communism that religion is the dope of the masses and must be destroyed. But that's easier decreed than done.

Events Point to New Struggle Within the Soviet Union and the Satellite Countries

By DeWITT MacKENZIE

AP Foreign Affairs Analyst

John Foster Dulles says "events may be shaping up to a new and intense struggle" within the Soviet Union and the satellite countries.

He adds that "Soviet leadership is having to contend with problems in the satellite countries where there is steadily growing revolt against the extreme tolerance of Soviet communism."

Speaking of Czechoslovakia, Hungary and Poland, Dulles declared that the people of these countries "will not willingly accept rigorous conformity to a pattern of life made for them in Moscow."

There are mighty few people out of the world's population of more than two and a quarter billion who don't believe in a God of some kind. They will fight for that belief when they might not fight for anything else.

That being the case why is it that communism persists in this anti-religion campaign? Surely the Red leaders know as well as anybody else that the elimination of religion is a hopeless objective.

The answer is that the doctrines of the major religions controvert what a totalitarian bolshevik stands for. Therefore the world can't be communized so long as it clings to religion. Thus the drive to spread atheism must continue.

Streamlining Government Is Easy Explained

By JAMES MARLOW

Washington, June 24—(AP)—Streamlining the government would be easy to explain and understand, if the job could all be done at one crack by the President or congress.

It doesn't work like that. It's a kind of step by step job, taking a lot of time, stalling in many directions—although now an effort is being made to follow a general plan.

Just as the government itself has been pieced and patched together over its whole history, so the job of trying to streamline it a bit must be done in pieces.

The general overhaul plan was outlined by the 12-man, special commission created by congress and headed by former President Hoover. Putting the plan into action is up to President Truman and congress.

Mr. Truman and congress have both started work on it. So far the Hoover plan is being followed in a general sort of way, although not in every suggested detail.

In May congress passed an act to reorganize the state department, the department now is going through its reorganization. The main idea, of course, is to get more work out of it more efficiently.

For example, the plan gives Secretary of State Acheson 10 assistant secretaries, instead of the six he has had. This is intended to lighten the load on him. And work of the department is being rearranged.

And congress is considering a bill now to further unify the armed services. The senate has passed it, but there's no assurance the house will. So nothing may come of this one this year.

This bill would give Secretary of Defense Johnson almost complete control over the three branches of the armed forces army, navy and air force.

Congress in 1947 passed a law unifying the armed services. But that law allows the secretaries of the army, navy and air force to go directly to the president over the head of their immediate boss, the secretary of defense.

The present unification bill would end that. So, congress has to decide whether it will do a tighter job of unification than it did in 1947.

The freedom of those three secretaries to go over the defense secretary's head was one of the major problems of James V. Forrestal, who jumped to his death from the naval hospital after resigning the job in the spring. He backed the bill now in congress.

Last Monday Mr. Truman offered seven reorganization plans to congress. If the lawmakers don't object he can go through with them.

(Much of the reorganization job can be done by simple presidential order—without any lawmaking by congress—provided congress does not object.)

This is the seventh plan, in outline. He wants formally—to make the national security council and the national security resources board part of the "office of the President."

When those two bodies were created in 1947, no one said where they belonged. Actually, they've been considered part of the President's office ever since. Mr. Truman's plan would make it a fact, officially.

The security council is made up of the secretaries of state, defense, army, navy, air force, and anyone else the President wants to appoint.

It has no powers, its job is to advise the President on matters of security. It meets only when the President wants it to.

The national security resources chosen by the President to sit on board is composed of government department or agency heads chosen by the President to sit on it.

Its job is to advise on our national resources. For example, if we faced war it would have to tell the President what our resources were in metals, factories, manpower, and so on.

You'll probably be hearing about reorganization plans for years to come.

Hiss said he first met "this perbers in the latter part of 1934, or early in January, 1935. At that time, the defendant related, he was counsel to the senate munitions committee.

Stryker then brought out that Hiss knew Chambers came to see him at the senate office building in Washington. There, the defendant continued, Chambers told him he wanted to write a series of articles on the munitions investigation in progress at the time.

Hiss visitor, Hiss testified, evinced particular interest in information about aircraft companies and the Du Pont interests.

"Did you at that time or any other time transmit and deliver to him any restricted documents of any kind belonging to the government?" Stryker asked.

"I did not," Hiss replied in an even voice.

DOROTHY DIX

Unhappy Parents Mar Home

Dear Miss Dix: I am a man of 32. My wife is 31. We have been married more than ten years and have four beautiful children. After about three years of married life my wife and I began to have spats, then little fights, then big ones. For the last three years we have meant nothing to each other except we both realize that we have a separate and distinct duty to our children. We have our private individual rooms and seldom meet except at supper. If I stay with the children she goes out. She never asks me for anything, whom or what I do. I never ask her, in short, we have nothing to do with each other and both are wasting the best part of our lives. Could we continue to live together for the sake of the children and let them see us loathing each other or should we part and let them see at least one of their parents in a contented frame of mind?

BEWILDERED

Answer: Why is it that a man as intelligent as you are has been unable to find the root of your trouble? Have you tried looking for that and honestly seeking the reason why you and your wife cannot get along together in peace and harmony?

Apparently neither one of you has committed any crime against the other. Nor are you in love with some other woman or man. It seems to be just a case of incompatibility of temper. Every thing you say or do gets on each other's nerves. Every word is a fighting word.

It has always seemed to me that any husband and wife who keep quarreling in the way you are is just a matter of self-control and determination. Of biting back a bitter retort. Of giving the soft answer that turns away wrath. Of using a little diplomacy and sidestepping the topics on which they know they disagree. Of paying a few judicious compliments.

I have never known a man or woman who could not be managed if approached in the right way. Especially are women easily controlled by a man who will take the trouble to handle them with gloves. A little flattery, a few attentions, a little jollifying are a sure recipe for working a wife. You can shut any virago's lips tight with a kiss.

You use finesse in dealing with those whom you come in contact in business. Why not try the same tactics with your wife? You don't tell your boss nor your customers nor your clients just what you think of them. You don't decide their opinions, no matter how silly they are. You don't call them down when they make a mistake, nor throw up their previous blunders to them. And you don't make disparaging remarks about their relatives.

Separate if Necessary
But if you have tried out all of these things and none of them worked and if you and your wife are so fundamentally antagonistic that you can never agree on anything, I certainly think that at your age you will be wise to part. You have many years of life before you and it is not right that they should be embittered by an enforced companionship that brings out all that is worst in you and that will warp your very soul.

Of course, you have your duty to your children and when you half-orphan them you do them a

Sunday School Lesson

By William E. Gilroy, D. D.

If one thinks of the earthly life of Jesus as lived in its Palestinian homeland, the Resurrection was its triumphant climax. It was not only the victory over death, but also the victory over the enemies who had sought to destroy Him. It was the triumph of love and goodness over hate and evil. It was the vindication of all that the Master had said, and of all that He had claimed to be, in that cause. It was a glorious triumph and climax.

But for the world at large into which Jesus had come — "For this end was I born, and for this cause came I into the world" (John 18:37) — it was not a climax, but a beginning.

It was now that He told His disciples to go forth into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature in obedience to that great commission. 20 centuries have seen the growth of Christianity. But even greater than the outward power of churches and organizations is the mystic fellowship of all believers, who have taken to themselves the Christian name, and who have sought to live according to the teaching and example of the Master.

The evil that Jesus fought, and that crucified Him, is still abroad in the world, seeking to destroy His teaching, setting up other standards, of selfishness, and worldly power, and violence, caring nothing for justice, and mercy, and right. So great is this evil, so apparently overwhelming and successful, as in the violence of war, that it is easy foolishly to underestimate the power of good, the forces of righteousness, and the strength of Christian progress toward what may still be a far-off goal.

But the power and impulse of Christianity are not in the past. Jesus lives, and is still leading on. He lives and leads in every detail of our daily life, no matter how lowly or great its place and environment, is attuned to love. He lives and leads in every service for one's fellowmen, many of them no longer bearing the Christian name, but known only through the power and influence of Christianity have penetrated. He lives and leads in the schools and colleges, many of them the direct product of Christian impulse and organization. He lives and leads in the world's dark places, literally fulfilling His command; but He lives and leads in those whose duty is in narrow places, performing, it may be, tasks of drudgery, or the

CLIPPED ANGEL

Copyright, 1949, NEA SERVICE, INC.

The Story: Mike McTag, a mining engineer who is telling this story, had been planning a vacation until he met Cory Parnell, beautiful and high-spirited daughter of the late Parbilled Parnell, an old friend of Mike's. Parnell's mine, the Dark Angel, which Cory inherited and was running in spite of miners' superstitions about women and mines, had been dropping in production. Mike is at first patronizing, but after a display of the Parnell temper, Mike speaks Cory, takes her to dinner, and then agrees to look over the mine, Dark Angel mine, situated in Umbrella Mountain, is a modern establishment. Mike meets "Uncle" Jake Whinnaker, not really Cory's uncle, but who has been with the Dark Angel since it started and now is mill superintendent. Archie Trask, in charge of everything underground, is also introduced to Mike, who immediately starts looking for the reason that the mine is no longer producing $15 ore.

Uncle Jake Whinnaker and Archie Trask launched into the details of the Dark Angel mine. Although things got technical, I must say Cory Parnell held her end up well.

There were few angles she didn't know about in the mill, and although I noticed that when I came to details of underground work she knew what it was all about.

There wasn't much to tell, but what there was soon convinced me that though the words were different it was an old old familiar tune.

The mine was playing out and the owner couldn't believe it. About an hour after we started Trask excused himself and said he had to get back to the workings, and shortly after that Uncle Jake was wanted over at the mill.

As soon as the door closed behind him I said, "Cory, you're wasting time. You're looking for ore that isn't there."

She broke out storm signals. "I suppose when Dad was alive the $15 ore we used to take out wasn't there either? Don't be an idiot!"

"Look," I said, "whatever ore you've got is being mined, and whatever is mined is put through the mill. That's elementary."

She said nothing, so I rubbed it in. "There are only two other things that might happen: First, your high-grade — such as it is — side the mine — in which case anybody would see it; and second, your high-grade — such as it is — is being pinched to the tune of 20 tons a day and the idea of anybody walking out with that much is fantastic."

She was silent for a minute, then she said stiffly, "You go ahead with your examination."

"All right," I said, "it's your money."

"What there is of it."

"That brought me up short. I looked at her for a minute. She was doodling on a pad of paper. Dollar signs."

"It's none of my business, Cory," I said gently, "but your dad is supposed to have stashed away three or four millions."

She looked up from the doodles. "Doug Weyman said last week some lawyer submitted an offer of $25,000 for the mine, providing we threw in the mill."

"Did you tell him to jump in the lake?"

She shook her head. "If you can't help me I'll tell Doug to go ahead and accept it. At least it would give us enough to pay your fee and the men's wages."

"What happened?" I said.

"You know how I used to love it when the papers called him a mining magnate?"

"Yeah."

"Well, he thought it would be nice if he was an oil magnate, too."

"That was kind of tough," I said slowly.

She looked up with a smile. "It doesn't make much difference to me — but there are people like Uncle Jake, and some of the men with families who've been here for 17 years. Miners never seem to save much."

I guess my face must have revealed how I felt about her just commonplace business of life, not as menpleasers, but as unto God. We sing in our prayer, "Jesus Still Leads On" and that prayer has its answer before it is spoken, for the surest, truest, most hopeful thing in all the world is that Jesus is still leading on. And in a world where there is so much of evil, it is good to know that so many are sincerely and devoutly following in His footsteps.

Boy Refuses to Speak to Mother

Boston, June 23 —(AP)—In a trembling voice, Gerald Sullivan, 14, said today "no," he did not want to speak to the mother who is charged with keeping the boy hidden in a guarded room most of his life.

It was the first meeting for mother and son since March 14, when Gerald first escaped to the outside world.

At that time the mother, Mrs. Anna Sullivan, 45, sobbed a story of how she had tried to keep secret the boy's illegitimate birth.

Today they arrived at a juvenile court for a closed hearing before Judge Frankland W. L. Miles, who will decide if his mother is guilty of neglecting him and whether she should retain his custody.

Just before they went into that hearing, however, they came face to face.

The mother's counsel, Atty. Daniel J. O'Connell said to Gerald: "Don't you want to speak to your mother, Gerald?"

The boy turned his head away and said nothing.

"Don't you want to say hello?" O'Connell asked.

Gerald's voice shook as he said, "no."

Miss Riley in Way of Three Top Pros

Oklahoma City, June 24 —(AP) Amateur Polly Riley, a smiling five-foot Texan, stood in the way of three topflight professionals in their bid for the women's western open golf title here today.

Polly brushed aside the usually unconquerable Mrs. Babe Dildrickson Zaharias in yesterday's quarterfinal duel, 3-1, to win a semi-final berth. Her opponent this afternoon was professional Betty Jameson, San Antonio, who won the western in 1942.

The other semifinal battle featured defending Champion Patty Berg and her staunch professional rival, little Louise Suggs, Georgia's representative.

Patty, still troubled by faulty tee shots, finished strongly to defeat Beverly Hanson, Fargo, N. D., 3-2 in the quarterfinals.

Miss Suggs won easily from Marjorie Lindsay, Decatur, Ill., 5-3.

Miss Jameson's victory over Carol Diring, Tiffin, O., was 4-2.

beat Ted Fox Jr., Memphis, 6-0, 6-2.

Little Rock Girl Wins Beauty Title

Little Rock, June 24 — (P) — The sharply and sharp-witted daughter of a Little Rock educator will represent Arkansas in the Miss America contest next fall.

Barbara Brothers, 18, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. Q. Brothers, was chosen Miss Arkansas last night at conclusion of the annual beauty and talent contest. Her father is dean of Little Rock Junior College.

Beverly Mai Jones of Warren, was runner-up.

The judges apparently were impressed not only by Miss Brothers' beauty and her demonstration of talent — she sang and displayed a water color — but also by her unhesitating replies to three questions which were asked the finalists to test their intelligence and ability to think rapidly under pressure.

The questions included her "pet" subject, young men.

Miss Brothers thought too many of them weren't as neat as they might be and that some of them didn't treat girls with proper respect.

She thought the boys ought to treat the girls "like young ladies, even though sometimes they might not be."

The other questions concerned why "real Americans are opposed to communism" and "what would do the most for Arkansas."

Her opinion on the latter point was that "a lot of easterners" ought to see what a land of opportunity Arkansas is and "soon it would be No. 1 on the map."

The new Miss Arkansas is five feet, five inches tall and weighs 115 pounds. She has brown hair, blue eyes and a fair complexion. Her bust is 34 inches, waist 24 and hips 35.

Miss Brothers is the second Miss Little Rock to become Miss Arkansas in recent years. Miss Pam Camp won the honor in 1947.

Besides a chance of becoming Miss America, Miss Brothers receives a $1,000 scholarship and a complete wardrobe for the trip to Atlantic City for the national contest.

Miss Jones won a $500 scholarship.

The 21 lovelies who entered the contest were reduced to ten at the beginning of last night's judging. These ten later were reduced to five: Miss Brothers; Miss Jones; Suzanne Hardin; Miss Malvern; Mary Lineback; Miss Brinkley; and Peggy Jean Kinneman, Miss El Dorado.

City Forces Water Line Completion in Blytheville

Blytheville, June 23 — (P) — The Blytheville water company will be forced to complete its water line extensions, Mayor Doyle Henderson said yesterday.

Henderson said the city would enforce an ordinance passed April 19 directing the company to make the extensions.

The Arkansas public service commission in Little Rock notified the city that work on the lines had been stopped. The commission attributed the utility company's action to protests by the city to the rate increase the company recently sought.

The commission said the petition for increases should not be heard until the improvements are made. C. W. Knapp, manager of the company, said some of the work had been stopped when it appeared the company might not be able to make a reasonable return on its increased investment.

Body of Young Man Recovered From River

Marked Tree, June 23 — (P) — The body of James Stricklin, 21, who drowned last night while attempting to evade arrest at Rivervale, ten miles northeast of here, was recovered this morning.

Deputy Sheriff Herman Talley of Rivervale said he arrested Stricklin at a dance hall for public drunkenness and fighting about 8 o'clock last night. A friend of the officer was helping take Stricklin to jail.

The officer said Stricklin forced his way from the car and was attempting to escape when he fell into Buffalo ditch. The body was found at 8:30 this morning in a tunnel which carries the ditch beneath Little river.

A coroner's jury termed it accidental death by drowning. Stricklin, whose home is in Marked Tree, is survived by a wife and one son.
